WASHINGTON, March 15, 2023—The Federal Communications Commission today announced it is targeting approximately $7.445 million for two additional one-year, pilot outreach grant programs to raise awareness of the Affordable Connectivity Program (ACP), the nation's largest broadband affordability in its history. The two pilot programs will test a variety of methods to reach out to federal housing communities, and work with trusted third parties to assist consumers with completing and submitting an ACP application. Last week, the Commission announced approximately $66 million in outreach grants to partner organizations nationwide to serve as trusted community messengers for the ACP in historically underserved communities and Tribal communities.

“These outreach grants are a powerful tool to help us reach communities that could benefit from the Affordable Connectivity Program,” said Chairwoman Rosenworcel. “We want families that could use help with their internet bills to know about this largest-ever broadband affordability program, now supporting internet connections in nearly 17 million households. Our goal is to get everyone connected, everywhere as we continue our work to close the digital divide.”

Today, the Commission announces that it has selected for grant funding 23 applicants to receive funding for the Your Home, Your Internet Program and 9 applicants for the ACP Navigator Pilot Program. The Your Home, Your Internet Program is receiving $4.995 million in funding allocation to increase awareness and encourage participation in the ACP for households receiving federal housing assistance; and the ACP Navigator Pilot Program is receiving $2.449 million in funding allocations to provide a limited number of neutral, trusted third-party entities, such as schools and school districts, or other local, Tribal or state government entities, to assist consumers in applying for the Affordable Connectivity Program. The Commission will announce a complete list of pilot participants at a later date.

On March 10, 2023, the Commission announced $66 million in grant funding to 197 selected applicants representing 50 states and territories. These awards were funded through the FCC's National Competitive Outreach Grant Program and the Tribal Competitive Outreach grant program and will allow community partners to pursue a broad range of ACP outreach projects.

Created by the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law, the Affordable Connectivity Program provides a discount of up to $30 per month toward internet service for eligible households and up to $75 per month for households on qualifying Tribal lands. Eligible households can also receive a one-time discount of up to $100 to purchase a laptop, desktop computer, or tablet from participating providers if they contribute more than $10 and less than $50 toward the purchase price.
